OPENING EXHIBITION

Nicholas Nixon: The Brown Sisters

November 13, 2005–February 20, 2006
West Building, Ground Floor

Beginning in 1975, Boston-based photographer Nicholas Nixon (b. 1947) has made one photograph each year of his wife, Beverly (Bebe) Brown, with her three sisters.

The resulting thirty-one photographs on view in this exhibition create one of the most compelling investigations of portraiture and time in contemporary photography. Viewers can study not only incidental changes in background, lighting, and dress, but also the gradual, incremental aging of the women, as well as changes in demeanor and their relationships with one another. Although the photographs have their roots in family snapshots, the artist's rigor and the subjects' commitment transcend the project's more informal heritage, creating a moving testament to human relationships.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

This exhibition was made possible through the generous support of the Trellis Fund and The Ryna and Melvin Cohen Family Foundation.

The Prints of Félix Buhot: Impressions of City and Sea

Through February 20, 2006
West Building, Ground Floor

French artist Félix-Hilaire Buhot (1847–1898) created impressionist prints notable for their inventiveness in depicting conditions such as rain, snow, mist, and fog. The Gallery maintains an outstanding collection of over one hundred Buhot prints and drawings, many rare, from which this exhibition is drawn. Sixty-four prints and four drawings closely examine Buhot's experimental techniques through his two most frequent subjects: the city and the sea. His city prints depict the grand public squares and streets of Paris and London; those of the sea show passing tempests, foreboding skies, and pervasive melancholy.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

CONTINUING EXHIBITION

Masterpieces in Miniature: Italian Manuscript Illumination from the J. Paul Getty Museum

Through January 2, 2006
East Building, Mezzanine

Painting in books was a major art form in the Middle Ages and Renaissance. The artistic achievements of manuscript illuminators from six regions in Italy during the twelfth through sixteenth centuries are explored through forty-four exquisite volumes, individual leaves, and miniatures from the J. Paul Getty Museum, as well as a select number of related medals and panel paintings from the Gallery's own collection, a seven-minute video on the complex process of creating a manuscript, and listening stations of recorded Gregorian chants that appear in two of the choir books on display.

The exhibition begins in southern Italy with a breviary from Montecassino, the cradle of Benedictine monasticism, proceeding to Bologna, the site of the first medieval university, and then on to Siena, Florence, and the Renaissance courts of northern Italy. It ends in Rome, the seat of papal power and home to some of the greatest High Renaissance works of art.

Organized by the J. Paul Getty Museum, Los Angeles.

Audubon's Dream Realized: Selections from The Birds of America

Through March 26, 2006
West Building, Central Gallery

John James Audubon (1785–1851) produced some of the most beautiful and lifelike depictions of birds ever created. This exhibition presents one of the artist's oil paintings, the superb Osprey and Weakfish (1829), a new gift to the Gallery from Richard Mellon Scaife, as well as fifty of the artist's hand-colored etchings selected from the Gallery's early edition of The Birds of America (1827–1838), one of only two known complete sets preserved in an original, unbound state.

Audubon's dream of recording every bird native to North America consumed nearly twenty years of his life and was realized with the publication of this mammoth edition consisting of 435 hand-colored etchings, all based on his vivid life-size drawings. Some of the set's most celebrated and outstanding prints will be on view, including American Flamingo (1838), Carolina Parrot (1827), and Ivory-Billed Woodpecker (1829), which depicts a species thought to be extinct until its recent sighting in Arkansas.

In conjunction with the education division of the National Gallery of Art, the Audubon Naturalist Society in Chevy Chase, Maryland is offering a bird-watching walk on November 19 and December 10, where participants may view birds portrayed by Audubon. To register, call (301) 652-9188, ext. 10.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington.

This exhibition is made possible by General Dynamics.

Origins of European Printmaking: Fifteenth-Century Woodcuts and Their Public

Through November 27, 2005
West Building, Ground Floor

The introduction of printing in Europe—an event as significant for the reproduction of pictures as it was for books—had a profound impact on Western culture. This exhibition of some 140 early woodcuts, manuscripts, printed textiles, and other related objects examines the multifaceted role of the replicated image in late medieval culture.

The majority of works in this exhibition come from the outstanding collections of the National Gallery of Art and the Germanisches Nationalmuseum, together with loans from many public and private collections throughout Europe and America.

Organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington, and the Germanisches Nationalmuseum, Nuremberg.

Air transportation is provided by Lufthansa.

The exhibition is supported by an indemnity from the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities.

Catalogue: hardcover, $65

CLOSING EXHIBITION

Monumental Sculpture from Renaissance Florence: Ghiberti, Nanni di Banco, and Verrocchio at Orsanmichele

Through December 31, 2005
West Building, Main Floor

Three monumental masterpieces of Italian Renaissance sculpture by Lorenzo Ghiberti (1378–1455), Nanni di Banco (c. 1380/85–1421), and Andrea del Verrocchio (1435–1488) have traveled to the National Gallery of Art to celebrate the completion of their restoration. It is the first time that major works by Ghiberti and Nanni di Banco are on view in the United States.

The works, Ghiberti's Saint Matthew (1419–1423), Nanni di Banco's Quattro Santi Coronati (Four Crowned Martyr Saints) (c. 1409–c. 1417), and Verrocchio's Christ and Saint Thomas (1467–1483), were originally created for the exterior of Orsanmichele in Florence, and they represent the highest achievement of fifteenth-century Florentine sculpture.

During the Renaissance, Orsanmichele—one of the most important though less well-known Renaissance structures—functioned both as a church and a grain storage and market facility; the Florentine trade guilds chose it as the site for statues of their patron saints. Since 1984 the statues have undergone conservation under the supervision of the Opificio delle Pietre Dure, Florence's premier national restoration center.

The exhibition has been organized by the National Gallery of Art, Washington, and the Opificio delle Pietre Dure, Florence, in collaboration with the Soprintendenza per i Beni Architettonici e per il Paesaggio and the Soprintendenza al Patrimonio Storico Artistico e Etnoantropologico, Florence.

The exhibition is made possible through the generous support of an anonymous donor.

The exhibition is supported by an indemnity from the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities.

Alexander Calder On-screen
November 5 at 10:30–3:30;
November 6 at 11:30–4:30
Ages 7 and up
East Building Small Auditorium (ebsa)

Learn about American artist Alexander Calder through two films about his work. Calder's Circus (Carlos Vilardebo, 1961, 19 mins.) shows Calder acting as ringmaster for the miniature circus he created in Paris, moving and working the tiny wire performers to walk tightropes, dance, lift weights, and do acrobatics. Mobile, by Alexander Calder (National Gallery of Art, 1980, 24 mins.) follows his journey with architect I. M. Pei, artist/engineer Paul Matisse, and museum officials as they face the challenge of creating the large, technically complex mobile for the National Gallery's East Building.

Calder's Circus will be shown on Saturday at 11:00, 12:00, 1:00, 2:00, and 3:00, and Sunday at 12:00, 1:00, 2:00, 3:00, and 4:00. Mobile will be shown on Saturday at 10:30, 11:30, 12:30, 1:30, and 2:30, and Sunday at 11:30, 12:30, 1:30, 2:30, and 3:30.

Bambi
(David Hand, U.S., 1942, 70 mins.)
December 3 at 10:30
December 4 at 11:30
Ages 5 and up
East Building Auditorium (eba)

This Disney classic follows a young deer, Bambi, growing up in the wild after his mother is shot by hunters. With friends like the playful rabbit Thumper and the bashful skunk Flower to help him through struggles, Bambi triumphs. An endearing animal tale about the beauty of nature, birth, love, and death, Bambi is a piece of film history: it was a first for animators to create animals that not only moved and looked realistic, but also achieved humanistic expressions at the same time.

The Children's Film Program is made possible by the generous support of washingtonpost.com.

Rivers and Tides: Andy Goldsworthy Working with Time

Andy Goldsworthy's evanescent sculptures with natural materials reflect the character of their local settings. His site-specific Roofis now on view in the East Building of the National Gallery. (Thomas Riedelheimer, 2000, 90 mins.)

A Model for Matisse: The Chapel of the Rosary at Venice

The warm and relatively unknown relationship between Henri Matisse and Monique Bourgeois (Sister Jacques-Marie), initially the artist's nurse who became his model, and, eventually, a Dominican nun, is the subject of this documentary based entirely on an interview with Sister Jacques-Marie, who was instrumental in procuring for Matisse a commission for one of his late masterworks, the Chapel at Venice.

I Am Cuba

A new 35mm restored print of one of the great Soviet classics, I Am Cuba (1964)—with lush black-and-white tableaux of street life and revolutionary awakenings in Havana set against the “good life” in clubs and resorts—features Yevgeny Yevtushenko's poetic script and Mikhail Kalatozov's brilliant direction. On the tenth anniversary of its initial U.S. release, a restored print of I Am Cuba with new subtitles and remastered Spanish soundtrack bestows new life on a celebrated classic.

Winslow Homer: The Nature of the Artist

This portrait, produced by the National Gallery of Art and featuring Homer scholar John Wilmerding, probes the artist's wide-ranging subject matter and technique. Presented in conjunction with the exhibition Winslow Homer in the National Gallery of Art.

Cine Chileno: Forty Years of Films from Chile

During the past forty years the cinema of Chile has developed from a relatively basic enterprise into a mature, elegant art form influenced as much by documentary tradition as by fiction or drama. Chile's celebrated directors, such as Aldo Francia, Miguel Littin, Raúl Ruiz, Patricio Guzmán, and Silvio Caiozzi have all been influenced by the nonfiction narrative. Several of them continue to work in exile; others have remained in Chile. This series presents twelve films, a sampling of the work that has been produced, sometimes under difficult circumstances, since the late 1960s.

On November 19, Patricio Guzmán will be present to introduce the Washington premiere of his new film Salvador Allende.

Other People's Pictures

Nine passionate collectors chat about their motives for collecting vintage snapshots, revealing an understanding that, no matter what their origins, these photographs share significant information about human nature, history, and the remarkable similarities in everyone's past. Presented in conjunction with the exhibition Nicholas Nixon: The Brown Sisters.

Risk and Reinvention—the Films of Louis Malle

The National Gallery joins the American Film Institute and the Embassy of France in presenting a complete retrospective of the works of acclaimed French director Louis Malle (1932–1995) on the tenth anniversary of his death.

Apprenticing first as a cinematographer with Jacques Cousteau and later as assistant to Robert Bresson in the 1950s, Malle attempted his own first feature, Ascenseur pour l'échafaud, in 1957. The theme of reinvention became his trademark. Nine films, including Malle's documentaries, will be shown in November and December.
